Question: 1

Officers Regina Petty and Thomas Fritz responded to a call about a loud party in progress at 5792 Windmere Avenue. Arriving at the house at approximately 1 AM, they heard loud rap music blaring from the house as soon as they exited their car. A couple dozen people were outside the house, spread out in the yard, on the porch, and on the sidewalk. As they approached the house, a man came out of the house next door and stopped the officers. He said "these people have been nothing but trouble since they moved in a year ago", and it was high time the police cracked down on them. According to the neighbor, within the last six months, police officers had been to the house to investigate public intoxication, another time for a domestic dispute call, a few weeks later for loud music, then again for cars parking illegally and impeding traffic, and the last time for a person who was drunk and disorderly. The officers said they were aware of the recent history of the occupants, and asked the neighbor to go back inside his house. They then approached the party house and asked for the homeowner. When he came to the door, the officers told him to end the party and send everyone home, or everyone there would be charged with disturbing the peace. The homeowner briefly argued with the officers, but then complied with their instructions. According to the neighbor, how many times had the police been to the house in the last six months?
